OUR SUCCESS COMES DOWN TO THIS. WE'RE THERE WHERE AND WHEN OUR CLIENTS NEED US.

KRS was established in 1968 and we have gradually grown alongside our major retail and commercial clients.

Retail clients such as Woolworths, Coles, Harvey Norman and Kmart need their electrical contractors to be particularly responsive in emergency situations. Where refrigeration or trading can be directly affected by an electrical failure, time is money. Sometimes lots of it.

PSG KRS now has a national footprint and can have their crews respond to client emergency call outs within half an hour in most locations around Australia.

Retailers need to have access to electrical maintenance that won't disrupt the normal course of business. Our crews work through the night to ensure uninterrupted trading and are well versed at maintaining a subtle presence.

All of our people have a relationship with our clients. The guys on the tools communicate with the store managers ensuring a cooperative understanding and ongoing dialogue.

Our investment in a well-trained workforce also guarantees our skills remain relevant to the ever-changing demands of new technologies.

Ours is also a value-added service offering in-house engineering for clients who prefer us to design and liaise with their architectural contractors from the beginning.

Our relationship with PSG will ensure we continue to offer the best, most experienced management people, we have a succession plan in place and that our people are well looked after into the future.

With operations now in Tasmania, Victoria, South Australia, NSW and Queensland, PSG specialise in design, manufacture, installation and servicing of commercial and industrial electrical and communications projects.

PSG currently has over 1000 employees with an annual turnover exceeding $300million.
